ABSTRACT

Orphan diseases are all medical conditions that impact 0.65 to 1 out of every 1000 people, according to the World Health Organization. Since these are not financially stable and feasible, they are typically not explored for their pathophysiology or the emerging therapy alternatives. On January 28, 1983, in the USA a law known as the Orphan Drug Act was formed to promote the study, creation, and approval of medications for rare diseases. There are currently as many medications for other infectious diseases as there are for tropical infectious diseases, with 11 pharmaceuticals (4.87%) recognized as orphan drugs. Several medications having orphan status are used to treat illnesses that no longer meet the requirements for orphan designation. Some businesses also manufacture and produce orphan medications. Nuclear cloning, rational drug design, and high throughput screening are all methods used in drug discovery programs that could lead to the development of new medicines. This article discusses orphan drugs, medical orphans, rare diseases, the orphan drug act, orphan drug design, the global market scenario of orphan drugs and various databases that contain information about orphan drugs. Patients who have been ignored by for-profit medication discovery efforts have hope for the future.

orphan drug is only utilized to treat rare diseases. A pharmaceutical used to treat, prevent, or diagnose an orphan disease is referred to as an "orphan drug" in the definition. Orphan diseases are rare illnesses that affect fewer than 200,000 Americans. Orphan medications only affect a small portion of the population; hence the government cannot afford to produce them. The disorders that orphan drugs are used to treat are known as orphan diseases. To declare a condition an orphan disease and grant it orphan status for medicines developed to treat it is a matter of public policy that is dependent on the law. The word "orphan" originates from the Greek word "orphans," which can be used to describe either a child who has lost one or both parents or an adult who has lost a child. The word "orbus" is derived from the purported Indo-European root "ORBH," which signifies "destitute," in Latin. The obsolete English words orphany and orphism were used to signify orphanhood or childlessness. Consider the terms for labour in certain modern European languages, such as the German Arbeit and the Czech robota. One who loses freedom is a slave who must perform difficult labour. In his 1920 drama R.U.R. (Rossum's Universal Robots), Karel Capek coined the term "robot" (female robotka) to refer to an imagined race of mechanical men and women. The etymology also reminds me of the relationship between orphans and workhouses.

MEDICAL ORPHANS

A patient without a personal relationship with their primary care physician is referred to as a "medical orphan" in the context of a Patient-Centered Medical Home (P.C.M.). Hepatitis G is an example of an orphan virus, which is a virus

ABSTRACT

Carotenoids are thought to offer advantages in age-related illnesses, including protection against some types of cancer (especially lung cancer), strokes, macular degeneration, and cataracts. There are 600 identified carotenoids as of now, and 50 of them are consumed in humans to produce the vital nutrient vitamin A. They are obtained from various sources like plants, animals, and microbes such as algae, fungi, and bacteria. They constitute various colored pigments especially in plants and offer different roles in plant body as well as health benefits in humans. Plasma lipoproteins transport carotenoids, which are metabolised by an oxidative rupture to retinal, retinoic acid, and trace amounts of breakdown metabolites. While xanthophyll's have an unchanging distribution between low-density lipoproteins and high-density lipoproteins, carotenes have a strong association with low-density lipoproteins. The current review offers insight into the occurrence, chemistry, biosynthesis, metabolism, and role of different carotenoids in human health in combating various disease conditions.

occurring compounds formed from isoprenoids. Due to the lack of the biosynthetic pathways necessary to produce carotenoids in animals, except for arthropods, most creatures are unable to synthesise them. Carotenoids are crucial pigments for photosynthesis, cellular repairs, and protection that are produced in the plastids of a plant's photosynthetic system [1].

Sources

There are more than 700 structurally different molecules in the class of natural chemicals known as carotenoids, which are found in large quantities in the environment (Fig. 1) [2]. The polyunsaturated isoprenoids that are found in plants are called carotenoids [3].

In plants, algae, fungi, photosynthetic bacteria, carotenoids are naturally

ABSTRACT

Breast cancer is a type of cancer that starts in the cells of the breast. It is more common in women but can affect men. Risk factors include age, gender, family history, and genetic mutations. Common symptoms include breast lumps, changes in size or shape, and skin or nipple abnormalities. Diagnosis involves imaging tests and biopsies. Treatment options include surgery, radiation, chemotherapy, hormone therapy, and targeted therapy. Early detection through screenings and awareness is crucial for better outcomes. Community pharmacists are pivotal in breast cancer awareness, education, and support, contributing to public health initiatives. They provide information on breast health, promote awareness campaigns, and encourage screenings. Pharmacists offer guidance on breast self-exams, counsel on cancer medications, and manage side effects. Their accessibility and community presence enhance early detection and comprehensive care for breast cancer patients.

ABSTRACT: Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD) is a progressive condition affecting the kidneys, resulting in a decline in their functionality over time. It affects millions of individuals worldwide. CKD affects renal drug elimination and other pharmacokinetic processes involved in drug disposition (Eg; absorption, drug distribution, nonrenal clearance [metabolism]). Drug dosing errors are common in patients with renal impairment and can cause adverse effects and poor outcomes. Dosages of drugs cleared renally should be adjusted according to creatinine clearance or glomerular filtration rate (GFR) and should be calculated using online or electronic calculators. Recommended methods for maintenance dosing adjustments are dose reductions, lengthening the dosing interval or both. Physicians should be familiar with commonly used medications that require dosage adjustments. Resources are available to assist in dosing decisions for patients with CKD.

ABSTRACT:

Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD) is a condition in which deterioration of kidney function occurs gradually over time. Hypertension (HTN) and Diabetes type II (DM II) were the major causes of CKD in most of the cases. Medication Therapy Problems (MTPs) were constantly observed in patients affected by CKD. Therefore, additional care should be provided to these patients. As part of this special care management, the profound activities of the clinical pharmacist were considerable. Clinical pharmacists play a pivotal role in correcting these medication therapy issues and inappropriate prescription patterns. The main objective of the study was to provide information related to the effectiveness of clinical pharmacist activities in the management of MTPs in CKD patients. The acceptance rate of these pharmacist-based interventions by physicians ranged from 79 to about 95%. Most of the literature reviewed demonstrates the positive impact associated with clinical pharmacist activities. Further increased research should be performed to increase the quantitative assessment of clinical pharmacist services.

Key words: Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD), Clinical Pharmacist Interventions, Medication Therapy Problems (MTPs), Medication Adherence, Disease Management.

ABSTRACT: The Medication Therapy Problem (MTP) Categories Framework is a consensus-based document developed by the Pharmacy Quality Alliance's (PQA's) Measure Development Team (MDT) 9, to provide a framework for development of measures involving MTPs. The framework is intended to standardize how MTPs identified during Medication Therapy Management (MTM) encounters are categorized within measures. The MDT incorporated input from numerous MTM providers and practices and referred to MTP categories established in the literature. This standard framework for use within measures will promote consistent categorization and coding of MTPs and the related actions/recommendations to resolve the MTPs. Medication Therapy Management (MTM) can be assessed in multiple ways. Currently, 2 - MTM measures are endorsed by PQA. The Completion Rate for Comprehensive Medication Review measure assesses the extent to which MTM-eligible patients receive a comprehensive medication review during their MTM-eligibility period. The Medication Therapy Problem Resolution (MTPR) monitoring measure is based on the PQA Medication Therapy Problem Categories Framework and evaluates the percentage of interventions that resolve medication therapy problems among individuals participating in an MTM program. PQA also has 2 - quality improvement indicators that focus on MTM i.e., Completion Rate for Comprehensive Medication Review (CMR) and Medication Therapy Problem Resolution (MTPR) monitoring measure.
